Welcome to "Folk Song Fête!"

Tonight, we present a program of folk music from many different corners of the world. Of course we can't include every "greatest hit" or offer music from every location or tradition. But what we sing tonight is many styles, many languages, many customs. Choral music writ large has, for many decades now, allowed singers and listeners the chance to perform and hear music from around the world. With huge potential to experience small samples of musical culture of diverse peoples, choral singing helps us learn about our fellow citizens of the globe, broaden our comfort with divergent styles, and deepen our sense of oneness. I continue to believe that making sounds with our voices is among the most basic human impulses, irrespective of identity. As humans, we share this common expressive impetus, and we give in to it. And each time we do, we announce our sameness.

J.D. Burnett
Artistic Director
